a firearm. Would you liken those to a registration of a firearm?

A. It could -- it could function that way. When you think about how those taxes would have been assessed and how they would have been paid, residents would have been expected to turn over a list of the items that they had that were taxable along with the payment for the tax, and they would have paid it to their local tax assessor. So it does sort of function in some ways along the lines of a registration, even though it wasn't labeled that. The purpose was the tax. But one of the net results would have been a list of people within the city limits who owned Bowie knives based on those who paid their tax.

Q. Okay.

So with that in mind, Section 1 of Measure 114 is a permit to purchase system. And the permit system requires the party to obviously not be a convicted felon and some obvious things like that that are not from only historical but more modern times.

So is there a -- at least as you reviewed it in your declaration, a historical analog to that type of system that you can point to?

A. (I'm sorry.) I didn't mean to cut you off. So you're asking did I discuss a permit to purchase analog

1 in my declaration?

- Q. Correct.
- A. No, I didn't.
- Q. Okay.

- Do you know of any?
- 6 A. There are permit systems from the 19th
- century, especially municipal permit regulations that
- 8 started in California in the -- I think maybe around
- 9 1870 or so. But like I said, I didn't -- I didn't
- 10 bring that material into this particular declaration.
- Q. And the reason for that is the original scope
- 12 was just simply to look at firearm capacity magazine
- 13 issues; correct?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. So in a nutshell, if you were to testify right
- 16 now in court, what would be your professional opinion
- about the history around regulating magazine capacity?
- A. Could you be more specific in terms of what
- 19 you mean?
- Q. Is it your impression that the state had the
- 21 right to regulate it or not, based on the history that
- 22 you reviewed?
- 23 A. Large-capacity magazines?
- 24 Q. Yes.
- 25 A. Yes.
